First Presbyterian Church of Albany: 250 Years of Community and Conscience

The Albany Institute of History & Art presents an exhibition commemorating the 250th anniversary of the First Presbyterian Church of Albany, including displays two gifts from the church in the Entry Way Gallery from January 26th to April 14th, 2013. A rare 1790 Church Penny, used by congregants as currency in the Sunday collection plate; and a hand-written subscription document signed by Alexander Hamilton, Richard Varick, and John Jay to help fund the construction of the second edifice built in 1795 on the corner of Beaver and Pearl Streets.

The First Presbyterian, now located in its fourth edifice on State and Willett Streets, has played a prominent role in Albany's history. It was established at the end of the French and Indian War to serve the growing numbers of Scots-Irish immigrants. From its beginnings as a place of worship for the young nation's leaders, through its pioneering educational outreach during the nineteenth-century, to today with its food pantry, overflow shelter, and the annual "Equinox" Thanksgiving Dinner, First Presbyterian remains a vital component serving diverse communities. To tell their story, the institute has organized an exhibition comprised of thirty objects including portraits of frequent attendees Governor John Jay (the first Chief Justice of the US Supreme court and a leading abolitionist, Richard Varick (an aide-de-camp to George Washington during the Revolutionary War, and pastor Eliphalet Nott (later president of Union College and RPI). This exhibit also includes a copy of Nott's famous 1804 sermon, Death of Alexander Hamilton, delivered in response to the duel between Hamilton and Aaron Burr (both attendees of the church), maps, prints, and models of the church's four edifices, along with photographs of the remarkable stained-glass windows by Louis C. Tiffany and J&R Lamb Studios.
